

BLOODY

Accidents Continue all Over the State

Even Dozen Mishaps of the Hunting Season

SEVERAL OF THE ACCIDENTS ARE FATAL.

THE SIDE OF HUNTER'S FACE

Blown Away by Shot from Friend's Gun—Father Injured by Son—One Man Drowned.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 13.—Edward McBride, aged 17, of Niles, a son of Sanitary Policeman James McBride, was accidentally killed while hunting with companion near North Jackson, yesterday.

Upper Sandusky, O., Nov. 13.—Chas. Cross, residing near Carey, was fatally injured by the accidental discharge of a companion's gun.

Findlay, O., Nov. 13.—At Van Lue Frank Lee was shot by Orville Early, while hunting quail. His injury is not serious. Early is a grandnephew of Jubal Early, the Confederate raider, while Lee is a distant relative of the family of Robert Lee.

Uhrichsville, O., Nov. 13.—While hunting Floyd Ferrell, of Freeport, was accidentally shot, and died from his wounds.

Bellefontaine, O., Nov. 13.—Fred Durnell and his son James were starting home from a day's hunt. A rabbit sprang up from the grass and the boy field at it, but the load took effect in his father's legs.

Medina, O., Nov. 13.—John Gage, who came here with a hunting party from Cleveland received a charge of shot in his arm by the accidental discharge of his gun.

Wapakoneta, O., Nov. 13.—A hammerless shotgun accidentally discharged sent a load into the lungs of Carl Kolter, a boy who was carrying it while hunting. The wound may prove fatal.

Findlay, O., Nov. 13.—While returning home from a day's hunt, Oliver Pratt, a 23-year-old farmer, had his gun caught in some bushes and it was discharged, the load entering his abdomen.

VOLCANO'S ERUPTION.

Causes Enormous Loss of Life and Property In Northern Guatemala—Effort Made To Suppress The Facts.

San Francisco, Nov. 13.—The Pacific mail steamer Newport, which has arrived from Central America brought details of the eruption of the volcano of Santa Maria, which spread ruin over a section of Northern Guatemala on October 25. Advances brought by the Newport show that Guatemala is using every effort to suppress the facts concerning the eruption and to minimize the amount of damage. The news brought by the Newport amounts to almost positive proof that many lives were lost as a result of the fall of ashes from the volcano; that thousands of horses, cattle and other animals were killed and that the rich coffee districts of the republic are ruined. It is reported that the loss of the new crop of coffee will amount to 300,000 cents of 15,000 tons.

Some of the finest and most expensive plantations in Guatemala are entirely ruined and the rate of exchange has risen to 1200 per cent. Roads and bridges leading inland from Champerico were ruined by the weight of mud and stones falling from great heights.

Some so those on the Newport said that fully a thousand persons perished in the upheaval.

domen. The wounded man crawled half a mile before help reached him and died a little while after he reached home.

Springfield, O., Nov. 13.—While two parties of young men were out hunting near Xenia, Edward Siminon of Spring Valley, was shot in the back with a Robert rifle by Warren Smith of Xenia. The young man was not seriously hurt.

Bucyrus, O., Nov. 13.—Word was received here that Prosecutor Gallinger was fined at Bangor, Maine, for killing a calf moose. Mr. Gallinger explained that the guide told him the moose was full grown and that he should shoot. Game Commissioner Carleton considered the explanation and allowed Mr. Gallinger to escape with the costs and the loss of the moose.

Napoleon, O., Nov. 13.—A peculiar accident occurred ten miles south of here while young Gusta Voigt of Holgate, was hunting with a crowd of companions. While the young man was endeavoring to make his way through a barbed wire fence, the trigger of his rifle caught in the wire and the gun was discharged. The bullet entered his right leg just below the knee. Amputation was necessary.

Troy, O., Nov. 13.—C. F. Grosvenor, 60, while fishing yesterday, fell from his boat and was drowned. He was stricken with apoplexy and fell overboard.

Rutland, Vt., Nov. 13.—Oscar Bergen, 10 years of age, was accidentally shot and killed by his brother, Gustave, 14 years old, at Proctor last night. The two boys had been hunting. The elder boy in cleaning his gun forgot it was loaded. The trigger snapped and the charge entered Oscar's head.

HE WAS IMPATIENT

Paris, Nov. 13.—The proceedings of the Chamber of Deputies were interrupted this afternoon and considerable consternation was caused by five pistol shots in rapid succession somewhere in the building. An investigation showed that the adjutant of the colonial infantry had become angry because he was kept waiting at the entrance of the gallery and had fired shots in the air to attract attention.

SHE LIKES A CIRCUS

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 13.—Because Wm. Banks refused to take his wife Eva Banks to the circus in October she filed suit for divorce in this city Wednesday, making this the leading charge.

FASTEST

Time Ever Made on Long Distance Run in The World

Cleveland, O., Nov. 13.—The record of the fastest time ever made on a long distance run by a suburban car, is now held, undisputed by the Lake Shore electric railway company. A special car carrying a big crowd of American Eagles who had been attending a celebration here, made a run from Cleveland to Toledo, a distance of 120 miles in the phenomenal time of 3 hours and ten minutes this morning.

A few nights ago a Buckeye Lake electric car made the midnight run from Columbus to Newark, running from station to station in 1 hour and 15 minutes. The distance is 27 miles.

Fire Raging.

Seranton, Pa., Nov. 13.—A great fire is raging at Olyphant, six miles from here. The business center of the town is threatened with total destruction. The fire department of this city has sent a number of engines to the scene.

Seranton, Pa., Nov. 13.—Twenty buildings, in the main street of Olyphant borough were wiped out today by a blaze which started at 10 o'clock in the general store of E. A. Atherion. It was the biggest fire in the history of the town and the principal business part of the borough is in ashes; loss $250,000.

Counterfeiter Wilder.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—In the arrest of Charles Wilder, the most skilful counterfeiter who has been caught in the last decade, secret service men believe they have shut off the source of the thousands of bogus fifty cents pieces which have been distributed in Chicago during the past three months.

In a house on the banks of the Calumet river, and half hidden by a grove of trees, Wilder and his wife have been living, the former once an expert molder, conducting his counterfeit business. For many months small tradesmen, particularly in the vicinity of the stock yards, have been all but ruined by the influx of thousands of dollars of counterfeit coin. The bogus money, to the eye of any but an expert, was perfect.

Mrs. Wilder, who attempted suicide, told a pathetic story of her husband's downfall. "It is true my husband did make counterfeit coins," she said. He has been doing it for a long time. Day after day I begged him, on my knees, to stop it and commence once more to earn an honest living. He laughed or grew angry, according to his mood."

ANDREWS

WRECKER OF THE DETROIT CITY SAVINGS BANK

Has Been Put to Work Making Shirts in the Jackson, Michigan, State Prison.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 13.—Frank C. Andrews, Detroit's ex-Napoleon of finance, ex-police commissioner and wrecker of the City Savings Bank, is wearing stripes in Jackson prison. His number is 7753 and he is making shirts.

Before his admission last night, he kept up a jumpy air and joked with the officers who took him to Jackson. On his way to Jackson Andrews gave following account of his downfall:

"When I settled up with the Detroit Construction company, a little over a year ago, I had nearly a cool million in street railway bonds, representing what I had acquired as a promoter in a successful series of street railway operations. I was a period of strained anxiety, and I thought I had earned a rest. My intention was to go to Europe with my real estate and to go to Europe with my family. Well, the bottom fell out of the securities and finished me."

FIRE

At the Engineer When He Refused to Stop His Train.

Frankfort, Ind., Nov. 13.—Four men made an attempt to hold up a south-bound Monon passenger train at Cyclone, six miles south of here at 9 o'clock this morning. The train slowed down when it struck a number of torpedoes upon the track but when the engineer saw four men step out with revolvers in their hands he opened the throttle and pulled away as fast as possible. The men fired several shots at the engineer without effect and they also fired at the passengers, a number having narrow escapes. Sheriff Combs and a posse from this city are now searching for the men.

YELLOW FEVER

Washington, Nov. 13.—The navy department has been informed by Rear Admiral Casey that yellow fever has broken out among the U. S. marines on the Isthmus of Panama. Officials of the department are extremely reticent concerning Admiral Casey's dispatch, and are unwilling to discuss the matter in any of its phases. Acting Secretary Darling, however, is now considering the advisability of making public some of the details of the Admiral's dispatch. The marine force on the Isthmus will probably be concentrated immediately in Colon and active steps taken to prevent a spread of the epidemic.

A HEAVYWEIGHT

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13.—Joseph Banks, a new member of the legislature weighs 360 pounds. There is no seat big enough for him, and a large chair has been put in the aisle for his use. He had never been out of his mountain county before, has never worn a collar in his life and never before saw a street car. He is a Republican and beat his opponent 200 votes.

TOTAL VOTE

IN SEVENTY-ONE OHIO COUNTIES IS REPORTED.

Seventeen Counties Yet to be Heard from—An Estimate on the Grand Total.

Columbus, O., Nov. 13.—With 17 counties yet to be heard from the tabulation in the office of the Secretary of State shows that 565,199 votes had been cast for the various candidates. Last year for governor in the same 71 counties 558,563 votes were cast for governor, showing a falling off of 23,763 in the total. Enough is now known to predict that the Prohibition and Socialist parties will cast the necessary 1 per cent of the total vote, which will enable it to hold a convention next year, and nominate a state ticket instead of resorting to nomination by petition. The vote of Hamilton county shows the greatest falling off in the list, the loss being 7,000 in round numbers.

The counties that are yet to be heard from are Allen, Columbiana, Carroll, Clinton, Cuyahoga, Franklin, Guernsey, Lucas, Muskingum, Noble, Perry, Putnam, Sandusky, Summit, Tolland, Van Wert and Wayne. It is known that there is a large falling off in Lucas and Franklin counties, which are located the cities of Toledo and Columbus. The experienced electors in the office of the Secretary of State say that the best returns will not be in until the last of the week, and that the official result will not be determined before Saturday or Sunday, with a prospect of further time being necessary for a purpose. Owing to the unusual delay in the receipt of returns of the counties sent to him by the various returning boards. Relying on opinion on the figures reported to the total vote is approximately 565,000.

EXPENSE

Of Two Molineux Trials a Half Million Dollars Molineux Plans.

New York, Nov. 13.—It has been estimated that the trial of Molineux has cost more than any other for a capital offense in any country in which the English system of jurisprudence is in vogue. The cost to the county of New York of the first trial approximated $250,000. This was expended in various directions, largely in fees for hand writing experts who were brought from distant states and for detectives who endeavored to trace Molineux's movements from his 12th birthday to the time of his arrest. The defense expended about $75,000 in the first trial and it is estimated that the total on both sides for the two hearings will foot up nearly $500,000.

Molineux has lost no time in endeavoring to retrieve the fortune lost by his father in securing his restoration to the liberty he had been deprived of for four years. He left his father's home in Brooklyn and visited the office of a theatrical manager in Manhattan.

It was reported that he had disposed of two plays which he had written while in prison, to the theatrical manager. One is a comedy and the other a melodrama, and it is said that both will be produced next season. According to the report negotiations for the sale of the plays have been going on for some time, but Molineux would not dispose of them until he was released. It is said that the comedy is a high-class play, while the melodrama is one especially adapted to popular priced houses.

The playwright to whom Molineux gave his plays was W. T. Price, dean of a school of playwriting. Mr. Price is known in theatrical circles as the man who first made known Mary Anderson's genius to the world. It developed as a result of Molineux's visit to the play reader that during his confinement in the Tombs he had diligently studied the technique of playwriting as a pupil of Mr. Price. He carried on his studies by correspondence, although Mr. Price paid him many visits in his cell and gave him much personal instruction.

Just what the young man's future plans are has not been made known. It had been intimated that he intended to go back to his old position as Superintendent of Herrman's factory in Newark.

Young Mrs. Molineux went to the Murray Hill Hotel and took away in a cab most of her effects. She told the clerk that she would send for the balance. The clerk said Mrs. Molineux told him she was going to Brooklyn, presumably to General Molineux's house.

It has been announced that Molineux and his wife will continue to live at his father's house for the present, at least. It was said at the house that Molineux would attend church next Sunday.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS MUST LIMIT THEIR CASES

Boston, Nov. 13.—Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the head of the Christian Scientists, has issued an important edict. In an editorial printed in the country number of the Christian Science Sentinel, the official organ of the sect, Mrs. Eddy is quoted as follows: "Until the public thought becomes better acquainted with our teachings Christian Scientists shall decline to doctor infectious or contagious diseases."

DASHING

Mrs. Parsons and Lovely Miss Brown "Bought" Freely from the Columbus Merchants.

Columbus, O., Nov. 13.—A dozen of the dashing beauties of the town are wondering when Mrs. Paraphoe Brown and Mr. Perry Parsons will call at the prospect store and make purchases for purchases of goods. Miss Brown and Mrs. Parsons, as the two women are known to some of the dashing men, are handsome women. They were attired in the very best fabrics and in the latest style. They were captivating and when they approached the clerks in the various stores this week to make purchases the floor walkers and other male employees lost their hearts.

Miss Brown and Mrs. Parsons bought liberally. Exclusive designs in dress goods, artistic creations in headgear, veils that would enhance the beauty of even the most beautiful, lingerie that would cause gasps if put on display, and hosiery of faultless build were ordered at some of the shops. At shoe stores high-heeled slippers and other footwear were "done up" for Miss Brown and Mrs. Parsons.

The past week has not been a lively one in retail trade circles because the weather has been too warm. There has been but little demand for winter wearables. But the shopping tours of the lovely Miss Brown and the entrancing Mrs. Parsons gave the proprietors of more than one store great encouragement.

The dapper duo did not care to lug the immense purchases with them. They had them tied up in neat packages and laid aside.

Neither did the liberal buyers pay cash for the goods they selected. They informed the storekeepers that "Mr. Brown, at the Southern" would settle if bills were sent to him. The reminders of the accounts due were sent to Mr. Brown at the Great Southern Hotel, but up to date he has not been found. And the two women who bought so miscellaneous and liberally have mysteriously disappeared.

The shop keepers insist that they have not lost anything by the transactions—except their tempers and valuable time. They deny that Mrs. Parsons and Miss Brown succeeded in getting away with any of the stuff, although knowing clerks "wink the other eye" when these statements are strenuously advanced.

BEARS

Will Now Entertain the President in the Southland.

Memphis, Nov. 13.—President Roosevelt is now in the woods and it's up to the bears to give him a good time. He has kept the secret service men on edge by disregarding their protection. He said today: "If any one really intends to get me, I cannot do anything to keep him from it."

The President has often said when urged to be more careful by Secretary Cortelyou or others about him: "I do not intend to make myself miserable by dodging imaginary enemies. If any comes I'll do the best I can at the time to defend myself."

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 13.—On the way down here the President received a warning in a letter that an attempt would be made to assassinate him. He has paid no attention to these warnings in the past and paid none to this.

As a punishment for addressing the Adjutant of his regiment by a civilian title a French reservist has been sent to prison for 15 days.

GOLD CHAIN FOUND

Is Recognized as Having Belonged to Miss McPhee—Perry Gave It to His Sweetheart.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 13.—The police spent all yesterday investigating the past life and movements of George L. O. Perry, the young negro who upon the release of Alan G. Mason, was charged with the murder of Miss Clara A. Norton at Waverly.

Last night the Somerville police found Perry's sweetheart and after persuasion got her to exhibit whatever jewelry she had received from Perry. Among the trinkets was a gold chain, which was immediately recognized as having belonged to Miss McPhee. Private marks on the chain proved the identification.

The chain had been given by Perry's sweetheart to her sister. The officers next secured letters written by Perry to his sweetheart, and one to her sister, and in the latter missive there is reference to a chain and the injunction not to say a word

FIRST

Session of Strike Commission Friday

Will Be Held at Scranton Pennsylvania

TWO SESSIONS TO BE HELD EVERY DAY TILL DONE.

EVIDENCE IS TO BE PRESERVED

On Graphophone Records and Filed Away—The Commissioners Are Now at Scranton.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 13.—Carroll D. Wright, of the anthracite commission, upon its arrival here last evening, told the reporters that the testimony to be heard by the strike commission will be preserved in a rather strange way. The stenographers will read their notes into a graphophone and the records will be filed away.

The first session of the coal strike commission named by Mr. Roosevelt will be held here tomorrow morning. All arrangements for their accommodation have been perfected under the direction of T. H. Watkins, member of the commission, whose home is in this city. Fourteen rooms and a private dining room have been engaged in the Jermyn Hotel for the accommodation of the commission. The sessions will be held in the Superior court room and will last from 10 to 12:30 and 2:30 to 4:30 each day until the work is finished.

Another Little War.

London, Nov. 13.—The evening papers today, commenting on the proposed move against the bandits in India, sarcastically head their stories, "Another Little War."

Washington, Nov. 13.—The police are determined to prosecute Mrs. Ellen Brown Linscott, the Christian scientist who treated Miss Louise Hoge, who died last night of pneumonia, without having had medical attention. The matter of issuing a warrant for her arrest on the charge of practicing medicine without a license has been put before District Attorney Gould.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Coroner Nesbitt this morning conducted an autopsy in the case of Louise Hoge, 28 years old, of Evanston, Ill., who died in this city last night without medical attention. Pneumonia was found to be the cause of her death. Miss Hoge was a believer in Christian Science. The coroner granted a permit for the removal of the body to Chicago without further investigation as it developed that the young lady had been offered medical attention but had refused it.

about it. When Miss McPhee was in the hospital during a lucid moment she asked: "Where is my chain?" At the time there was an abrasion on her neck caused by the forcible tightening of a chain worn there. After her death search was made for the chain, but as it was not pawned in this vicinity no clew to the murderer was secured in this way. The police refuse to give the names of the girls.

All of Perry's clothes were taken from him because an officer thought he detected a blood spot on a shirt sleeve.

Perry admitted the spot was blood, saying that he had had a bleeding tooth. All the negro's clothing at home was seized. Some of this, especially a coat, had stains which look like blood. Professor Wood of Harvard, will examine the garments.

FOOT BALL

..AND..

OTHER SPORTS.

The two representative teams of Columbus, in whom great interest centers in Newark, are preparing for hard games Saturday. The Ohio Medics eleven will play the strong Shelby professional team, and there is no doubt as to the result. The Medics should and probably will win by a good margin. With Ohio State the case is different. They line up against the strong and fast team of the University of Illinois, of Champaign, Ill., on University field Saturday, and are certain to be defeated unless a miracle happens. The Illinois are strong in every department of the game, and we look to see O. S. U. defeated by a score less only than that rolled up against them by Michigan. In fact all that Coach Hale is hoping for is that his team can hold Stahl's men to a moderately low score. The members of the team and students also feel the same way.

WESLEYAN'S CHAMPIONSHIP CHANCES.

The Delaware Gazette says that the coach, captain and players who saw the O. S. U. case game last Saturday are confident that Ohio Wesleyan can defeat both these teams, and that the state championship is almost certain to be with the Methodists this season. It also accuses the O. S. U. players of lack of determined winning spirit, and of indulging in "rough house" tactics that should disqualify those who practice them. It is hoped that officials in the games to be played by the State University, punish these offenders in the future.

BAD SPIRIT AT O. S. U.

A bad spirit is shown to exist in the Ohio State University, among the student body, and one that is wholly indefensible. All season the Ohio Medics had consistently "rooted" for the State University, on one occasion sending their band and an organized party of "rooters" to a game on University field. This commendable spirit of local pride and loyalty received a great shock on the occasion of the Notre Dame game, when O. S. U. rooters went to the game and consistently "pulled" for the Medics' opponents.

It was decided that O. M. U. could not stand for this, and in the case game Medics students encouraged the Scientific boys by cheering and in many other ways. The spirit shown by O. S. U. is small and mean and no doubt is aroused by the success of Coach Jack Eckstorm of the Medics eleven, who acted in the same capacity for O. S. U. and was "turned down" by them.

The Medics team is so much superior to Ohio State that there is not even room for jealousy, yet the actions of these university students shows a childish, petty spite, which is contemptuous.

BETS ON SATURDAY'S GAMES.

The result of the Minnesota-Wisconsin game next Saturday at Minneapolis is the subject of several wagers among Newark football men. As far as can be learned the bets are even money. It is a good betting proposition, and either end is worth a value. Those who support the Badgers chances, seem to think there is nothing to it but King's men, but they overlook the fact that his team had trained and was on edge for the Michigan game. There is no question but that the team has gone back, whereas the Gophers have been coming and on Saturday will put a team on the field in the finest physical condition possible. It is hardly probable that the Wisconsin line can withstand the attack of their heavier Gopher opponents, supplemented by the catapult plunges of the 200-pound Minnesota backs. If Wisconsin plays the game she did against Michigan, she will win, but this does not seem probable, and we rather expect to see a Gopher victory.

YALE-PRINCETON CONTEST.

Detailed hospital reports are issued from New Haven agent the condition of the Yale team for the game with Princeton next Saturday. Rafferty, Shevlin, ends, Kinney, tackle, Captain Chadwick half, and Metcalf quarter are being kept out of scrimmage practice, the two latter because they are said to be overtrained, resulting in nervousness which prevents them getting sleep, and the former by injuries. From Princeton comes the news that the line-up of the Tigers has not been definitely settled for the Yale game, and many shifts in the guards' and tackles' position are yet being made. McClave, halfback, is out with an injury and will hardly be able to play.

FRESHMEN VARSITY BACKS.

The injury to Lee Maxwell, quarterback and field general of the Chicago team, who had his shoulder blade broken Monday night in practice, was a hard blow to Stagg and the Maroon supporters, in view of Saturday's contest with Michigan, as it is almost certain Maxwell will be unable to play.

Captain Sheldon, who has played halfback all season, was shifted to quarter and Iverson, Bezdek and Wightman will carry the ball.

This will be the first time in the history of any big university that three freshmen have played the three back positions in an important championship game.

Richards-Weekly.

Mr. Charles Richards, son of Mr. David Richards, of this city, and Miss Cora Weakley, of Nutter's Farm, W. Va., were married on Wednesday evening. The ceremony took place at the parsonage of the First Presbyterian church, on Locust street, and was performed by the Rev. L. S. Boyce at 5 o'clock. Immediately after the conclusion of the ceremony the happy couple repaired to the home prepared by the groom at 228 Hudson avenue, where they will be at home to their friends. Mr. Richards, the groom, is connected with the Auditorium, cafe, and is a young man highly esteemed by all who know him, while the bride is a most estimable young lady. They have the best wishes of all their friends.

After a thirty years' courtship a couple, both over 50, have just been married at Leeds, England.

REMARKABLE SUCCESS.
Of a New Catarrh Cure.

A large and constant increasing majority of the American people are catarrh sufferers. This is not entirely the result of our changeable climate, but because modern investigation has clearly proven that many diseases, known by other names, are really catarrh. Formerly the name catarrh was applied almost exclusively to the common nasal catarrh, but the throat, stomach, liver, bladder, kidneys and intestines are subject to catarrhal diseases as well as the nasal passages.

In fact, wherever there is mucous membrane there is a feeding ground for catarrh. The usual remedies, inhalers, sprays, douches or powders, have been practically failures, as far as anything more than temporary relief was concerned, because they simply dry up the mucous secretions, without having the remotest effect upon the blood and liver, which are the real sources of catarrhal diseases.

It has been known for some years that the radical cure of catarrh could never come from local applications, but from an internal remedy, acting on the blood and expelling the catarrhal poison from the system.

A new internal preparation which has been on the market only a short time, has met with remarkable success as a genuine, radical cure for catarrh.

It may be found in any drug store, sold under the name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, large pleasant tasting lozenges, composed principally of antiseptic ingredients. Bloodroot, Red Gum and similar catarrh specifics. Dr. Ainslie in speaking of the new catarrh cure says: "I have tried the new catarrh remedy, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, upon thirty or forty patients with remarkable satisfactory results. They clear the head and throat more effectively and lastingly than any douche or inhaler that I have ever seen, and although they are what is called a patent medicine and sold by druggists, I do not hesitate to recommend them as I know them to be free from cocaine and opiates, and that even a little child may use them with entire safety."

Any sufferer from nasal catarrh, throat or bronchial trouble, catarrh of the stomach, liver or bladder will find Stuart's Catarrh Tablets remarkably effective, pleasant and convenient, and your druggist will tell you they are absolutely free from any injurious drugs.

PENNSYLVANIA RAISES WAGES OF EMPLOYEES TODAY.

Smokeless Locomotives—Track Inspection—Railroad News of the Day Local and General.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 13.—The Pennsylvania railway this morning announced a 10 per cent raise in wages to all employees east of Pittsburgh getting less than $200 per month. The raise affects 10,000 men.

Smokeless Locomotives.

At the last annual meeting of the American Railway Master Mechanics' Association the president, Mr. Watts, who is superintendent of motive power and rolling stock on the New York Central railway, says the Pittsburgh Post, spoke in terms of praise of a device for securing the smokeless combustion of coal on locomotives, which had been tested for several months on a number of locomotives under his charge. In a recent letter to the Engineering News, Mr. Watts reaffirms his favorable verdict as to the device. It is required for all new passenger equipment, and about ten sets a month are being ordered for old passenger engines.

The smoke consumer which is spoken of in such high terms by a competent authority can be applied to any locomotive. Its indirect advantages are a reduction of the work of firemen, a decrease in the amount of sparks thrown from the stack, and decreased fouling in the tubes. The direct advantages are the consumption of smoke and the saving in fuel. One series of tests showed a saving of 20 per cent. Another, and perhaps a more trustworthy test, showed a saving of 14 per cent. Where economies like this can be secured by stopping the smoke nuisance the railroad which fails to stop that nuisance is standing in its own light as well as in the light of the community.

Many smoke-consuming devices for locomotive engines have been offered to railroad managers, have been tested and found either worthless or so expensive that their use seemed inexpedient. Here is a device which an experienced railroad man says is efficient and economical. Why do not the officials of our local railroads at least experiment with it if they are not doing so? Smoke every week, it appears to most observers, becoming more and more a nuisance in this Pittsburgh region, where reasons of economy in the use of coal have not their force as in New York. The locomotives in the streets, suburbs and outlying districts of the city of Pittsburgh are becoming an intolerable nuisance to the people resident there, to say nothing of the money loss by injuries to furniture, house furnishings, merchandise, etc. Coal no doubt is the basis of our wealth and progress, but some of its evils can be done away with, if not materially reduced. As Andrew Carnegie said, it is the great question of the future of Pittsburgh.

IT MATTERS NOT

How Sick You Are or How Many Physicians Have Failed to Help You.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will Cure You if a Cure is Possible.

Doctors are not infallible and there are many instances where they have decided a case was hopeless and then the patients astonished everyone by getting well and the sole cause of their cure was Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. A case in point is that of James Lettuce of Canajoharie, N. Y., who writes:

"Some years ago I was attacked with pains in my back and side that were fearful in the extreme. I could not control my kidneys at all and what came from them was mucous and blood. I was in a terrible state and suffered intensely. A prominent physician of Albany, N. Y., decided that an operation was all that would save me. I dreaded that and commenced to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I felt better almost instantly. When I had taken about two bottles, the flow from the bladder was much clearer, the pain subsided, and I was saved from the surgeon's knife and am now well."

Dr. W. H. Morse, the famous physician of Westfield, N. J., has this to say of this great medicine:

"I have known it to cure chronic inflammation of the kidneys, where the attending physician pronounced the case incurable. No form of kidney, liver, bladder or blood disease, or the distressing sicknesses so common to women, can long withstand the great curative power of this famous specific. Its record of cures has made it famous in medical circles everywhere."

It is for sale by all druggists in the New 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles—less than a cent a dose. Send for booklet—enough for trial, free by mail. Dr. David Kennedy Corporation, Rondout, N. Y.

"KING OF GHOULS"

Story of Cantrell Who Identified the Man By Bullet Wound Scar--Indiana Grave Robbers.

Indianapolis, Nov. 13.—Wm. Moffitt, whom Rufus Cantrell describes as the "King of the White Ghoul," and who, it is alleged, has been in the grave robbing business for many years, was arrested at his home yesterday, as was telegraphed to the Advocate. They have had Moffitt on their list for several weeks, but had difficulty in locating him. Upon finding himself confronted by the detectives Moffitt remarked: "You think I'm mixed up in this grave robbing business, but I'm not. I knew you were looking for me."

Moffitt denied all knowledge of Cantrell and his associates. He was taken to jail. Cantrell was awakened to look at him. Cantrell peered through the bars in the dim light, and, catching sight of Moffitt, shouted: "Hello, Billy; where'd ye get the whiskers?" Moffitt replied: "Have worn them for 25 years."

"You're a liar," replied Cantrell. "You did not have 'em two months ago."

Moffitt then admitted that his whiskers were but six weeks old, but he persisted in denying all knowledge of the ghoul, although Martin, another ghoul, was aroused from his cell and identified him despite his whiskers. Cantrell then broke in with the remark: "I can prove right here I know you. What kind of a scar have you on your back?" Moffitt denied that he had a scar until the detectives threatened to strip him, after which he admitted one was there. Cantrell said that Moffitt was shot one night four years ago by the watchman at the Central Indiana Hospital for the Insane while he was robbing the grave of one of the patients who had died. Moffitt then admitted his identity and was committed.

Cantrell said that while he and Moffitt and others of the gang were opening the grave the night watchman fired on them, hitting Moffitt, who fell into the grave. Cantrell and his associates escaped unharmed and fled from the scene. Several prominent physicians were immediately notified, and the matter was hushed up, the night watchman making no report to the authorities, although Moffitt was desperately wounded.

Cantrell says that Moffitt was discharged as janitor at the Indiana Medical College because he demanded pay as janitor while also drawing pay for "material." After his commitment Moffitt was called upon by an attorney for the white men involved in the grave-robbing cases, and after he had gone the prisoner declined to talk. The detectives tried the "sweating" process, but he evidently had been carefully coached, as nothing could be gleaned from him.

The arrest of Moffitt caused a decided flurry in medical circles. Yesterday evening he was released on $5,000 bond, given by one of the local surety companies. Moffitt has been employed as a common laborer since the grave robbery expose, at $1 per day, and he owns little or no property. Moffitt is the third defendant since the expose who has held his tongue, and whose release has been brought about with little difficulty.

Rufus Cantrell, the chief negro ghoul, through whose confession the arrest of Moffitt was consummated, is much alarmed over this new phase of the case, as he fears that he and his companions, who have told the truth, will be left with the bag to hold. Cantrell alleges that Moffitt put him in the business, and that Moffitt some years ago drove a horse which had all his master's fear of a police officer, and could not be induced to venture near one, day or night. This made the animal invaluable for grave-robbing purposes.

Last night Detectives Asch and Manning arrested Deroy Williams, colored, as an accomplice of Cantrell and his gang, and Williams confessed that he joined two raids, and that he aided in stealing the bodies of Wallace Johnson and Meredith McGullem from the Lick Creek cemetery.

The police report that Moffitt has been a grave robber for 30 years, and for a long time he was associated with Jeff Garrigus, now dead, who made no secret of his uncanny profession. They also report that Moffitt is the mysterious "Dr. Billy" who figured in the famous William E. Merrick wife murder case in 1879-80. Merrick married the daughter of Captain Kingston, who heads a prominent family in Perry township. Mrs. Merrick was a school teacher and highly educated. Two years after the marriage Merrick became enamored of his niece, it is said, and poisoned his wife. After trying to sell her body to a medical college, it is alleged, he buried it under a big log in the creek bottom. After his arrest he said that his wife had eloped with "Dr. Billy," whose other name he did not know, and that on the night of her disappearance "Dr. Billy" and his (Merrick's) favorite driving nag, Merrick went so far as to insist that the names of both his wife and "Dr. Billy" be called in open court during his trial. He was convicted and executed alongside of John Archer, who was sentenced to death for killing George Leggett, a fellow gambler. Moffitt got his nickname of "doctor" because of his association with the medical colleges.

TONIGHT

The DeMotte Lecture at Taylor Hall in the Y. M. C. A. Building Will be Given.

Prof. John B. DeMotte delivers his lecture "The Harp of the Senses" in Taylor Hall tonight. This is the second number in the Y. M. C. A. course. As there is likely to be a very full house the holders of the course tickets and all others who expect to attend the lecture are earnestly requested to come early. Prof. DeMotte will be introduced promptly at 8:15 and it will cause unpleasant confusion to have a part of the audience come in after he has begun. The admission ticket is 50 cents. A few choice seats are left at 75 cents. The intermediate gymnasium class will meet at 7 o'clock tonight instead of 7:30. This will enable all the boys to hear Prof. DeMotte's lecture at 8:15.

Track Inspection.

The B. & O. railway began yesterday a complete and thorough inspection of all its tracks, tunnels, bridges and structures. A special train left Newark early in the morning and made an inspection of the road through Columbus, Cincinnati and to Louisville. On next Tuesday a train will leave Baltimore and will run to Connelville, via Washington. Proceeding the next day the road will be inspected to Chicago Junction. Saturday the trip will be made from Chicago Junction to Grafton, via Newark, Bellaire, Cameron and Fairmont.

The bridge and structure inspection is under the supervision of J. E. Greiner, engineer of bridges and buildings. Two separate parties have been formed which will have separate territories to inspect. Great preparations have been made to insure a speedy and an accurate knowledge of existing conditions.

The automobile has not yet found its place on the tariff list of Brazil, but comes under the head of machines, paying 50 per cent ad valorem.

Climate and topography, as well as the condition of the roads and the individuality of the people, militate against the future of the automobile in Brazil.

There is no law upon the statute books of Chile relating to the automobile, which is probably due to the fact that there are no automobiles in that country.

DELIGHTFUL TRIP

Through the East and South by Newark People—They Visit Historic Places.

Mr. P. W. Brubaker, wife and daughter, Mrs. Joseph Moser and little son, have returned from a trip in the East. During this time they had the pleasure of visiting several of the principle cities and places of interest made famous by the war of the rebellion. First, the city of Washington, Mount Vernon, the home of the father of his country, to Warrenton Court House and Culpepper county, Va.

While at the latter place they were shown an old brick church, the brick made in England in the year 1726, brought to America in the year 1728, and hauled about 70 miles and put in the church house in the year 1730. In 1775 the British burnt the inside of the church. It was rebuilt in 1777 and stands in good shape to the present time. It is called Paul Parish. Here is where Elder Stream, a Baptist preacher, preached in the year of 1743. He came over from England in the year of 1714. And in this church Elder John Ireland, a Baptist preacher, while preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, was arrested, put in the Culpepper county jail, with the vilest of men and was smothered with brimstone and Indian pepper, because he refused to stop preaching. This was in the year of 1770. While in Culpepper they visited the battlefield, and on September 17th they crossed the Blue Ridge mountains to Luray, the county seat of Page county. While there they were entertained by a cousin, Mrs. Susan Long, and had the pleasure of visiting a cave which is called the Luray cavern, widely known for its beauty and grandeur. They visited a point on the Blue Ridge known as "Sky Land" or "Stony Man." This is the highest point on the mountain range. They visited the "White House" that stands on the east side of the Shenandoah river. It was built in about 1730 and was a fort against the Indians up to 1780. It is still standing and well preserved. While here they were entertained by a cousin Mr. Lee Long, who has some four thousand acres of land under high cultivation, and has sold several hundred head of cattle this year; also visited a cousin Mr. Philip Long, who is feeding about 50 head of fine cattle that average over 1600 pounds. They visited a cousin, Clitus Brubaker, who is feeding a fine lot of cattle; he has a magnificent home and entertains royally; often as many as seventy-five or a hundred of the Primitive Baptist church people.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Foxy Grandpa" the first novelty of the season, described as a "musical snapshot" will appear tonight at the Auditorium. Wm. A. Brady has given the piece a superb production. "Foxy Grandpa" is the work of the hitherto untitled and unknown dramatist, R. Melville Baker, and his inspiration was the series of cartoons which have been amusing the world for a year or two. The principal character, Goodelby Goodman, "Foxy Grandpa," is a dear gentleman who has more heart than worldly wisdom and whose love for his grandsons and determination to sacrifice himself for their amusement and benefit form the basis of the story, the plot being built up around the complications resulting from a case of mistaken identity. Signor Bolero, a "factual artist," undertakes to impersonate "Foxy" for the amusement of a summer hotel party. Bolero and "Foxy" both become entangled in the snares of Signorina Colonna, a dashing Italian adventuress from whose clutches "Foxy" escapes by a clever ruse. Mr. Brady has engaged a fine company, an attractive chorus and a number of pretty girls to appear in the dances. The scenery is said to be particularly pretty and the costumes are varied and gorgeous. "Foxy Grandpa" has been a tremendous success, running fifteen weeks at the Fourteenth street theatre in New York City, last spring. It is replete with catchy musical numbers, graceful dances and comic surprises.

FOR NOVEMBER 14.

"The Fisherman's Daughter," in which Hilda Thompson (the clever comedienne and a superb company, will be seen at the Auditorium next Saturday night, November 15, is said to be one of those plays that please people who like to be made to feel like laughing and crying at the same moment. It has certainly proved one of the most successful new plays of the season.

NEXT MONDAY.

"Spotless Town," is announced for next Monday night, Nov. 17.

On November third they crossed over the Massanutten mountain to Newmarket and on down the valley to Winchester, where they were entertained by a niece, Mrs. Prof. Coole, better known to her many Newark friends as Miss Daisy Cline White (there they were shown a house where in was imbedded a cannon ball in the south wall, shot there during one of the hard battles).

They visited many noted battle fields, including Harper's Ferry, which is noted for a famous battle. Altogether the entertainment was royal in every respect and reluctantly they said good bye.

PERRYTON.

"Happy Bert Largen," the ventriloquist, gave an entertainment here on Monday night at the Odd Fellows' hall. There was a good crowd in attendance, half of the proceeds being turned over to the lodge for the benefit of the widows of the deceased members of the lodge. Bert's little son, Perle, gave an exhibition of his ventriloquist powers. The little boy is said to be the youngest ventriloquist in the country. Saturday evening of this week "Happy Bert and his whole family will give another entertainment for the sole benefit of the widows of deceased Odd Fellows."

AN OLD FAVORITE

PHILIP, MY KING

By Dinah Maria Mulock Craik

THIS poem is considered one of the finest apostrophes to childhood ever written and is honored as such by being given first place in the "Poems of Infancy and Youth" in Bryant's "Library of Poetry and Song." The "Philip" referred to was Philip Barker Marston, an English poet, who was born in 1839 and died in 1880. Despite the blindness that afflicted him from an early age, he wrote a number of metrical works. He was also the subject of the poem, "A Blind Boy," by Thomas Gordon Hake.

"Who bears upon his baby brow the round And top of sovereignty?"

LOOK at me with thy large brown eyes, Philip, my king!
For balaheod's the purple shadow lies Of babyhood's royal dominions.
Lay on my neck thy tiny hand With Love's invisible scepter laden; I am thine Esther, to command Till thou shalt and thy queen-handmaiden, Philip, my king!

Oh, the day when thou wast a-wooing, Philip, my king!
When those beautiful lips 'gin suing, And some gentle heart's bars undoing, Thou dost enter, love-crowned, and there Sittest love-gladdened—Rule kindly, Tenderly over the kingdom fair: For we that love, ah! we love so blindly, Philip, my king!

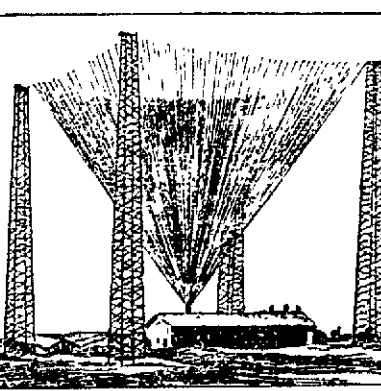

I gaze from thy sweet mouth up to thy brow, Philip, my king!
The spirit that there lies sleeping now May rise like a giant, and make men bow As to one Heaven-chosen amongst his peers.
My Saul, than thy brethren higher and fairer, Let me behold thee in future year: Yet thy head needeth a circlet rarer, Philip, my king!

A wreath, not of gold, but pain. One day, Philip, my king!
Thou too must tread, as we tread, a way Thronged with cruel and cold, and gray: Rebels within thee and foes without Will snatch at thy crown. But march on, glorious, Marry yet monarch! till angels shout, As thou sit'st at the feet of God victorious, "Philip, the king!"

THE RECENT WORK OF MARCONI

(Special Correspondence.)

TABLE HEAD, Glace Bay, Cape Breton, Nov. 7.—The eyes of all interested in wireless telegraphy are today turned to this bleak little point on the extremity of Cape Breton island, where a $200,000 wireless telegraph station, designed for the purpose of flashing messages across the broad Atlantic, has been erected by Signor Marconi. It is not so long ago that the famous Italian inventor was in a humble way, but now that he has demonstrated the utility of his new method of communication he has at command every resource which the scientific and industrial world can give him.

Marconi's new station has some unique features, notably four steel towers rising to a height of 215 feet above the surface of the headland. These are constructed of bridge steel, each tower consisting of four columns connected by lattice-work of metal and further strengthened by ropes of wire anchored to the ground. The towers are so placed as to form the corners of a square, the sides of which are 210 feet long, every tower being connected with its neighbor by a horizontal bridge of wire. From this runs the electrical equipment upon which so much depends.

Fifty copper cables reach from each connecting wire to the operating house, erected in the center of the hollow square formed by the towers. Every cable is composed of seven strands of eighth of an inch in diameter, tightly twisted together. Seen from a short distance, these cables look to be single wires, but in reality there are 350 wires on a side, or 1,400 wires in all. The object of using many fine strands instead of a few large rods is possibly to secure a larger amount of surface for a given amount of copper. The solitary "vertical wire" of the original Marconi experiments is thus found to be enormously multiplied, the effect being to develop longer Herz waves. More satisfactory results should consequently be obtained by the wireless expert.

As the fifty cables of each of the four groups go downward they converge a little toward the center of the four sided structure. The lower ends, therefore, are arranged along the sides of a square much smaller than that formed by their supports at the top. All terminate, of course, in the operating house. This is a long, low, narrow structure, guarded night and day by watchmen whose special business it is to keep inquisitive visitors from prying into Marconi's secrets. In addition to steam engines and dynamos, the building contains a quantity of other apparatus, the secret of which is known only to Marconi and a few of the directors of his company. The engines represent 115 horsepower and are connected to what is known as an alternating current machine which will produce the electric spark necessary to agitate the ether in the air and produce the conditions favorable for transmitting messages.

As his receiving instrument it is expected that Marconi will continue for the present to use his now famous coherer, although it is known that he has invented a substitute for it a magnetic detector which is said to be more satisfactory in some respects. When he desires to make sure that the messages sent by his system are not intercepted or otherwise interfered with, he will doubtless make use of the tuning system, the rights to which he purchased last spring from the inventor, Professor M. I. Pupin of New York.

There are other novel points in the electrical equipment of this expensive wireless telegraph station. In place of the old-fashioned induction coil transformers will be used. As a matter of fact, the station here is almost a duplicate of that built some time ago at Cape Cod, though it contains many improvements which have been devised by the inventor since the Cape Cod station was erected. The station at Poldin, in Cornwall, has also been modeled on lines similar to the two structures in this country. Originally Poldin boasted merely a great circle of poles in place of the steel towers, but a high wind played havoc with these and when the work of reconstruction was begun Marconi decided to copy the stations on this side of the Atlantic. The result, as everybody knows, has been a great increase in the efficiency of the service.

In the United States the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America has been organized with a capital of millions, to control all the American business, including, of course, Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. Companies have also been formed in England and Belgium.

The Old Reliable

Our Goods are as Advertised.

For eight years we have given the people of Newark more goods and better results for their money than any other shoe house in the city. Why can we do this? One, and the only reason is because we buy our shoes right. At all times we have a buyer in the Eastern markets watching every opportunity to secure our stock at as low a price as possible. And then we are willing to give our patrons the benefit of it, and sell them out at almost the same price as other dealers buy them for. We have just received a lot of new samples that go at prices as quoted.

TELEPHONE FRANCHISE

Was Not Granted By Granville Council as Company Wouldn't Agree to Lower Rate--Wells Jury Disagreed.

Granville, O., Nov. 12.—A meeting of the village council was held on Tuesday evening for the purpose of considering the matter of granting a franchise to the Central Union Telephone company.

All members of the council were present and the matter was talked over at considerable length, and it was finally decided to grant the franchise provided the terms could be agreed on. They went over the matter very carefully until they came to the rates that should be charged for telephones, and upon this question the members of the council failed to agree.

Mr. Hulshizer made a motion that the franchise be granted and that the company charge not more than $1.50 per month for 'phones for business houses, and not more than $1 per month for 'phones or residences, for a term of fifteen years, or during the life of the franchise. The Bell people would not agree to the rate and the councilmen were not disposed to grant another franchise unless a rate better than the one given by the independent company was secured.

Mr. Case then made a motion that the company charge not more than $2 for business houses and not more than $1.50 for residences. Lost.

Council then adjourned.

The case of the State of Ohio vs. Col. W. C. Wells, manager of the Buckeye Lake Hotel, who was charged with having purchased fish that were unlawfully caught, was tried before Squire Dorsey and a jury on Wednesday, and consumed nearly the entire day, and considerable interest was manifested in the outcome. Judge J. M. Swartz was the attorney for the prosecution, while Attorneys P. B. Smythe and F. M. Black of Newark, were the attorneys for the defense.

Wedding Near Glenford—Funerals of David McCracken and Joseph Bell at Brownsville.

Brownsville, Nov. 13.—At the residence of the bride's parents near Glenford, Miss Della Gall and Mr. Burge Orr of Brownsville were married. They will live near Brownsville.

David R. McCracken died November 8 at the state hospital, Columbus, and was brought home on Monday and buried in the Brownsville cemetery. He leaves a wife and one daughter, the wife being too poorly to attend the funeral.

Joseph Bell, an old Brownsville boy, who was killed by an electric car in Columbus, was interred in the Brownsville cemetery last Friday.

The case went to the jury about five o'clock in the evening. The jury, after being out about an hour and a half reported that they had disagreed, whereupon the jurors were discharged.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Goodspeed of Chicago, who were the guests at the home of Dr. Emory Hunt for a short time, have returned home.

The citizens of Granville are to be given a rare musical treat at Recital hall on Friday evening of this week, when the Philharmonic String Quartette will give an unusually fine entertainment. The entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Conservatory of music.

Mrs. E. W. Childs of Milwaukee, Wis., who is visiting her son, Prof. Howard Childs, in Newark, spent Sunday in Granville.

Mrs. George Austin of Palmsville, Ohio, who was visiting here for a short time the guest of Miss Moore has returned home, having had a most delightful visit.

The case of the State of Ohio vs. Isaiah Jones, charged with fishing with a fyke net, is being heard in Squire Dorsey's court today. Judge J. M. Swartz is the attorney for the prosecution while Smythe & Smythe represent the defense.

Miss Mary Sample and brother, Herbert Sample, have gone South and will spend the winter in Georgia.

Miss Alice Dodson of Zanesville, was the guest of friends in the village on Monday.

Mrs. Clara Jones-Roberts, who has been quite sick for some time past, has been taken to Columbus and placed in a hospital for treatment.

The Senior preparatory students of Doane Academy entertained their friends at the home of Rev. H. H. Tuttle on Wednesday evening.

SWITCHBACK

And Laughing-Gallery to be Installed at Buckeye Lake for Amusement of Visitors.

Buckeye Lake, Nov. 13.—The C. E. L. & N. have decided on two especially fine improvements, consisting of a large switchback railway in the shape of the figure 8, and an elegant laughing gallery with forty mirrors of different sizes and shapes. The switchback railway will excel anything of its kind in the state and will be appreciated by all. The laughing gallery which is to be erected is the only one in this section of the state and will be quite an attraction for old and young. The above improvements are due to the energetic efforts of Col. W. C. Wells.

PASSENGERS FRIGHTENED

Electric Car Left The Track on Hill Just at Edge of Granville But Nobody Was Hurt.

Granville, O., Nov. 13.—Wednesday evening as the six o'clock car from this place to Newark on the Newark and Granville street railroad, was going over the steep hill at the east end of the village, on its way to Newark, it met with an accident which caused considerable delay and might have resulted in the loss of life. The car, which was a new one, and was being run over the road for the first time in charge of Motorman Price, and contained about twenty passengers. As the car was rounding the hill at the highest point, the new trucks, which were a little stiff, did not yield rapidly enough to the curve in the track, causing the car to jump the track, its momentum carrying it down the side of the hill some distance to the fence. Had the car gone over the steep embankment at that point, the loss of limb and life might have been serious. As it was the car was delayed several hours, and the passengers were badly frightened.

WITH CANE

COX STRUCK HIS WIFE ON THE HEAD

Inflicting a Frightful Wound—Cox Arrested but Released on Bond Until Friday.

Jacob Cox, the well known crippled peddler of small articles, who uses a tricycle which he propels with hand-levers, as a method of locomotion, made an assault on his wife, about 1:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at their home 13 Holliday street.

Mrs. Cox had been visiting in Columbus and returned home Tuesday last, having determined to go there to live, as she says, her husband was so irritable that it was impossible to live with him. Among her effects was a carpet which she intended to pack up and take with her, and when she went to take it up, Cox struck her a crushing blow on the left side of the head with a heavy cane, which he always has with him.

The blow cut a gash above the eye several inches long and to the bone, and the eye was nearly swollen shut soon after she received the wound. Officers Carroll and Ziegelel locked Cox up, but he was later released on bond for his appearance before Mayor Forry Friday morning.

CODE BILL

Goes Into Effect Saturday—Secretary of State Laylin to Issue a Proclamation.

Columbus, O., Nov. 13.—All the provisions of the new municipal code necessary to enable the present city officials to prepare for the new organization of the city government next spring will go into effect next Saturday. On that day Secretary of State Laylin is required to issue a proclamation designating which of the municipalities of the state are cities and which are villages as provided by the new code. Copies of the proclamation are to be sent to the mayors of the various municipalities and by them transmitted to council, where they are to be made a matter of record. Saturday the people of Newark will therefore, through the newspapers be officially notified by Mr. Laylin that Newark is recognized as a city under the new code. The city council is expected to receive similar notification from the mayor next Monday night. But there is a string tied to the notification. The code provides that 30 days thereafter each municipality in the state shall be either a city or village as designated by the proclamation.

In the meantime it is expected that the city council will begin to prepare for the new city government and the election to take place under the new code. If the mayor and council cannot subdivide the city into four new wards as provided by the new code by January 1, the mayor is to pass up the job to the common pleas judge.

How Lee Made Way With Pope

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

August 18-28, 1862

[Copyright, 1902, by G. L. Kilmer.]

GENERAL ROBERT E. LEE kept the enemy out of Richmond for three years. He didn't stand on the defensive all that time, or he would have lost the great prize earlier in the game. Richmond was saved in 1862 and 1863 by the boldness of Lee in going after the enemy on his own ground. The middle of August, 1862, found the Federal army under General John Pope patrolling the Rappahannock river, a natural barrier between Washington and Richmond. Shortly before that date this same army of Pope had crossed south of the stream to march upon Richmond, then changed its course and crossed back again to stand between the advancing army of Lee and Washington.

General Pope was a new figure in the battles of the east in 1862. He suddenly appeared on the Federal side as the new star of the nation. His own people predicted great things of him, and he was not modest in calling attention to himself in army orders which found their way to Lee's camps. He announced that his headquarters "were in the saddle; that he hoped to see the 'faces of the enemy'; that he didn't care about guarding the rear of the army. Lee heard all of this and knew how to estimate an opponent who began a campaign by despising his foe.

The Confederate commander intended at first to cross to the north bank of day one wing of Jackson's corps fought with Joe Hooker at the crossing of the railroad over Kettle run, five miles west of Manassas Junction, and the other wing fought a new force which came by train from Alexandria at the crossing of Bull run, five miles east of Manassas. Jackson had surrounded Pope's base of supplies and was himself surrounded by Pope's divisions, whose leaders didn't know he was in the vicinity until they ran into him unawares. Much talk has been indulged in over the war in South Africa because of the lack of scouting. But here was a campaign in the summer of 1862 where both sides had able scouting cavalry, and yet the movements were more or less carried on in a fog of ignorance. All the troops were on the march day and night. A division located by scouts at sundown would be miles away next morning. Jackson's raid on Pope's commissary, for that is what his initial move amounted to, brought on the bloody conflict of Second Bull Run, or Manassas, and one of Stonewall's lieutenants who was with him all through the affair says it was due to the accidental capture of one of Pope's dispatches by Jackson's scouting parties. Jackson knew he was in a trap if his foe was half awake, and he kept look-outs in all directions. One of his outposts took in a Federal courier who carried a dispatch directing the division of General King to march at once the Rappahannock in the face of Pope and give him battle, but when he reached the projected crossing Pope's army was massed along the river. With the corps of Longstreet and Stuart's cavalry Lee kept up a demonstration at the crossing which deceived Pope, and while the latter waited, confidently expecting the enemy to fight him on his own ground, Stonewall Jackson's corps marched up the river to another crossing, and the morning of Aug. 26, a week after the first show of forces on the Rappahannock, he marshaled his whole command on Pope's line of communications with Washington, twenty miles in his rear.

For a general who didn't care anything about his rear and who yearned to see the faces of the enemy Pope showed astonishing swiftness in turning his back to Longstreet and hastening after Jackson. With a skillful soldier, in Pope's shoes Jackson would have been lost and Longstreet would have been overwhelmed. Lee had really cut his army in two in the face of a powerful enemy. Jackson was in Pope's rear, but he was alone, cut off from his supports.

But instead of smashing Longstreet and then turning to catch Jackson between his own columns and the fresh troops on the other side of the field, Pope started his different corps upon a haphazard for the wily Stonewall. For a week confusion reigned within the Federal lines over twenty miles of territory around the old battlefield of Bull Run. In his hunt for Stonewall Jackson Pope attempted to drag a field ten miles broad and twenty long lying between the Warrenton pike and the railroad from the Rappahannock back to Washington. Since he first met with Lee the first week in August he had been re-enforced with four divisions from McClellan's army on the James river and one from Burnside's force in North Carolina. His orders to his generals were to hold the railroad and keep the enemy from concentrating on the old battleground of Bull Run.

One of the danger points on the railroad which Pope was anxious to save was Manassas Junction, the sole supply depot for his army outside of Washington. This Jackson swooped down upon Aug. 27, and after his soldiers had appropriated to themselves all they could eat or carry away he gave the rest to the torch. That same on Manassas Junction by the Warrenton pike.

Now, the middle of the afternoon of Aug. 28 Jackson was moving cautiously across the rough country skirting Warrenton pike, heading westward to unite with the columns of Longstreet, which he supposed were moving east to meet him. King's Federal division was moving from westward to eastward about that pike, little supposing that Jackson was on the route ahead.

Jackson planted one of his horse batteries on a ridge overlooking the pike where it was screened by a bluff close to the road and by bushes from view of the marching troops. Just as the famous Iron brigade of the west marched along in front of the guns they opened with shells. The first regiment had filed past and went on. The second regiment in the column happened to be the Second Wisconsin. It halted, closed ranks and charged up the bluff at the unseen foe. Just as the heads of the Wisconsin men appeared above the crest of the ridge they were fired into by Confederate infantry concealed in the hollow between the road and the battery.

Meanwhile the third regiment of the Iron brigade marched on up the pike, and the Nineteenth Indiana, a regiment never before under fire, brought up the rear. The Indians saw the unequal fight of their comrades and rushed up the bank to attack the Confederate infantry. At that moment a second Confederate battery unharmed beside the first, and for an hour the fresh soldiers from the prairie fought with the coolness of veterans. Out of 433 men who charged up the bluff 239 were shot down. The Federals were delayed in their march and suffered unequal slaughter, but they delayed the march of Jackson westward. The sound of the firing brought other troops to the scene, and Jackson was forced to take up a position to defend his isolated corps until Longstreet could get through to his aid.

In marching from the Rappahannock to meet Jackson Longstreet often attacked the Federals on his front to give the impression that he would break through. Finally he followed Jackson's roundabout course, and the junction so notable in history was effected Aug. 29.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

"The Wild American."

According to copyrighted cable messages published in the Pittsburg Dispatch, Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, has been causing amazement in the European mind by the lavish manner in which he has been spending money in Rome and the Italian provinces. Mr. Schwab, so it is reported, has been chartering steamships and railway trains with as little regard for expense as the average Italian gives to the cost of a plate of macaroni. When appearing in public, it is said Mr. Schwab has attracted as much attention as the king himself. The cablegram says: "Half the professional beggars in Italy are besieging Mr. Schwab. He is referred to everywhere as 'the wild American.'"

Friends of Mr. Schwab say his idiosyncrasies are the result of mental overwork and that he delayed too long his trip to Europe in search of change and recreation.

Morse Stephens' Popularity.

Cornell students will keenly miss this year Morse Stephens, the big hearted, sympathetic Oxford graduate who held the chair of English and modern European history, who has gone to the University of California. Morse, as he was familiarly spoken of, was consulted by the students on every occasion and was in particularly great demand as a speaker at their banquets and smokers. His fondness for the weed is proverbial at Ithaca. "He is asking for the rocks," said a jingle in the college annual, "to build upon the campus professors' smoking box."

Another jingle that appeared in the Widow, the students' humorous paper, was about "the butts in front of Morrill." Morrill hall being the building in which Professor Stephens used to deliver his first morning lecture.

At the student gatherings Professor Stephens almost always "talked round the corners of a huge cigar."

Will Study Our Journalism.

Oliver A. Borthwick, king's messenger, has taken a run over from England to take a peep in at some of our big newspaper shops. Soon after his arrival he said to a reporter in Washington: "I've just come over to study American newspapers, their machinery and methods, and shall visit New York, Chicago, Washington and Philadelphia to do this. I am already amazed at your enterprise and wonderful way of finding out things and expect to get much benefit while here."

Canitie Corelli.

Marie Corelli, the novelist, has published an article in an English magazine on "Vulgarity in Wealth," in which she says some pretty harsh things about rich Americans, including Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan and Mr. Andrew Carnegie. She likens Mr. Morgan to "a moneyed octopus stretching out his greedy tentacles in every direction and striving to grasp the British shipping industries and interests." Miss Corelli calls Mr. Carnegie a "poor human biped" and accuses him of patronage, ostentation and swagger. But the gem of this fierce onslaught by Miss Corelli is found in this paragraph: "As a nation of bombast and swagger the United States is a kind of rare show in the world's progress. But her strength is chiefly centered in dollars, and her influence in the social world teaches that dollars are the only ware. English society has been sadly vulgarized by the American taint."

The Beach Comber and the Man-of-war.

By J. F. ROSE-SOLEY.

[Copyright, 1899, by the Author.]

The copra house was down on the rock bound beach, some 50 yards away from the shore, a stretch of uneven, stony soil, with grass patches here and there and great black rocks showing out from the surface, separating the two places where the trader did his business. The old man's weary feet had worn a deep track across the plot; up and down he went many times a day. The copra house—the title is a misnomer, but it is always used in Samoa—was but a mere flimsy erection of rough boards, though iron roofed and water tight. Further, the door was provided with a very substantial padlock, which the trader was at great pains to lock and unlock every time he visited the shed, for the place held the only merchandise the country could produce—namely that there was to be traded for. The little bits of oily, brown, evil smelling copra must be kept dry or else they would rot long before the time came for shipping them to Europe. And they must be protected from theft, or else the cunning natives would think nothing of taking a few basketfuls at night and reselling them to the trader next day. Therefore every time a Samoan came, perhaps with but a few baskets of the copra, the old trader, with a weary sigh, would take a key down from its accustomed nail and plod down to the shed. It was quite a solemn and serious business, this purchase of a few shillings' worth of produce, and both sides went about it with becoming gravity. The first question that had to be decided was whether the copra was green—that is to say, whether it had been merely warmed in the sun or whether it had been properly dried by several days' exposure.

As the copra is bought by weight, it is, of course, to the native seller's interest to dry it as little as possible, while the trader, on the other hand, does not want to lose 20 or 30 per cent by shrinkage. So the two argue the point out together, while I sit on the wire inclosed veranda and watch from afar the wordy conflict. Silei, the industrious girl, has got her sewing machine out. She does not put it on a table, as the white lady would, but rests it on a kerosene case on the floor and squats cross legged before it. Of course it is a hand machine; natives do not take readily to the use of the treadle. She is fashioning really gorgeous lava-lavas out of the brightest prints Manchester can produce, and when they are made they will be hung up in the store and sold for half a dollar each, perhaps in exchange for the very basket of copra the native is arguing about. He sweats with a fluency of Biblical expression which only long missionary training has rendered possible that the copra has been three days in the sun, whereas the trader, judging from his experience, asserts that at the outside it cannot have been more than one, and in cloudy weather too.

At last the trader, grumbling somewhat, purchases the copra, for he knows if he does not it will go to his rival close by. He is consoled by the reflection that his balances are 12 pounds out in every 100; also he is an expert at weighing and by dexterously manipulating the scales can make the copra appear several pounds lighter than it really is, and so under the waving palms by the side of the rippling lagoon, nature smiling on them with her most innocent expression, the two complete their ingenious transaction. Both are cheating, and both know it. So perhaps it does not matter very much. The native, having been well taught by the missionaries, will go to church three times next Sunday and say his morning and evening prayers more fervently than ever, so that he will save his conscience. As for the godless trader, he has no conscience. He has long since lost even the memory of the article. So we need not concern ourselves about him.

At last, after another half hour's haggling in the store, the native goes away with the goods which he has been persuaded to take in exchange for the copra, and the trader comes out of the house and seats himself wearily beside me, mopping his face the while. As usual he harks back to the old times. "Things were different in those days," he said. "Then we could do as we liked with the natives. Now they can do as they like with us. We have to cut things fine to make a living at all." And to console himself he took a long drink of kava, emptying the coconut shell, which held about a pint, at one draught.

Silei laughed the musical little laugh of the Samoan maiden. The whirr of the sewing machine ceased and she looked smilingly at the nearly empty bowl. She knew she would soon have to fabricate more kava, an occupation which she particularly enjoyed, I suppose, because it gratified her maiden vanity by enabling her to exhibit herself in the most graceful of attitudes. "Yes, yes, girl, you can make some more," said the trader. "I'll keep you from the machine, and we don't want that infernal thing clicking away while we are talking. 'The old days were the times,' he began, 'before any one invented this copra and we used to take oil from the natives in payment for everything. Why, even the missionaries used to take a big tank outside the church door and would take up the collection in oil. It was gallons of oil instead of dollars then, but they got the money just the same in the end, and the church prospered.'"

His face clouded as he made this last remark. Perhaps the undoubted poverty of mission work in Samoa brought him no consolation. Perhaps he would have preferred the natives in their original lual barbaric state rather than civilized and Christianized and educated up to a standpoint of keen bargaining which rendered it difficult for even the superior intellect of a white man to overreach them.

He did not say this, though. "I've made more money in a week then than I can do in a year now," he went on. "Forty years ago, when I was but a young fellow, I started trading on the southern side of Upolu. There was not a white man within 20 miles of me, and I could get any price I liked for an old uniform coat, especially if it had brass buttons on it, but a Tower musket—that was the thing," and his rugged old face lit up at the pleasant reminiscence.

"I had the place to myself for three years, and you may be sure I made a pretty good thing out of it. Wish I had some of the money left now. Then old Jack Wilkinson came along and settled down near me."

"But who was Jack Wilkinson?" I asked. "Never hear of Jack Wilkinson—old Jack, as he was always called? Why, I thought everybody in Samoa knew of him, but he was getting to be an old man then, and he's been dead long since, and I suppose you young people have forgotten all about the old fogies."

"Well, I'll tell you about Jack. He was a hard case, one of the regular old style beach combers. He had been in don't know how many years in the group and had grown to be almost like a native. He used to wear a lava-lava instead of trousers, just like a Samoan, and he could go about barefoot anywhere, even on a coral reef, and that's a thing few white men can manage without cutting their feet to pieces."

"They did say," and he lowered his voice unconsciously, "that he was one of a party of convicts who had escaped from Australia when it was a penal settlement. They stole a boat and somehow found their way here and made themselves at home among the natives, but the story was only whispered between white men, and it would have been as much as one's life was worth to even hint at the thing to old Jack. He was a handy man with his knife, and there were no police about to call him to account for his actions."

"I got along well enough with Jack, though I must say he had ways of dealing with the natives which I hardly approved of. They were afraid of him, though, and fed him on the best the land could furnish. Jack never did anything for them in return. He spent his days lying on a mat in the shade of one of their big cool houses, open all round, so that the breeze could pass through and Jack could see all that was going on without even moving. Sometimes, when he was particularly energetic, he would go fishing on the reef at low tide, when coral showed up high above the water, and it was easy enough to spear malauli with long three pronged native spears."

"Still, I soon found it was to my interest to keep in with old Jack. He got twice as much oil as I could for the same amount of trade, and, though he was always abusing and ill treating the Samoans, strangely enough they would take their oil to him rather than to me, and I was as smooth as butter to the natives, talking kindly to them and always giving them little presents. I own that I could never quite make it out to this day, and no man knows the crooks and twists of the Samoan character better than I do. I cannot understand what gave Jack his extraordinary influence over the people, though, to be sure, in the end they killed him on Maunono. But I'll tell you about that some other time."

"So it happened that Jack became a sort of subtrader or assistant and would buy the natives' oil, giving them in return orders on me for so much trade. I paid him a good commission, and I could afford to do it, for so long as Jack was sober he was the best hand at bargaining with the Samoans I ever saw, but when he got drunk there was no holding him. I had to get a case of gin down from Apia now and again or else Jack would never have staid with me. Then he would go tearing wild for a week or two until it was all finished and perhaps wind up by setting fire to a native house, or carrying off a woman, or something like that. I had to pay for the damage, and then Jack sobered down and went along right enough for another month or two."

"It was this failing that had got the beach comber into trouble at Tanua, a village about 20 miles along the coast, where he had lived before coming to my place. The natives there had put up with him for a long time, but at last they got sick of the business, and the chiefs of the town turned dead against him and gave him a week in which to clear out. I never knew rightly what brought this about, for Jack was very reticent on the point, but it must have been something very bad or else the natives would never have summoned up courage to behave as they did. There was a taupe, a village virgin, mixed up in the business, I know, a fine looking girl. She stuck to him all through and came away with him to Salua, where I was."

"For a long time Jack had been playing off an old beach comber's bounce on the natives at Tanua. Whenever they would turn a bit nasty he would threaten to bring a British man-of-war down on them and have them well punished. This used to scare the people, for men of war were scarce in those days, and the Samoans had an almost superstitious awe of their guns. It's different now, for the natives have seen so much of modern war vessels that they're grown to despise them. They aren't afraid of being shelled either. Why, I've seen them over on Upolu, when a man-of-war did actually fire on the reefs, sitting round smoking quite comfortable in the bush behind, while the shots were dropping into their village and doing no harm at all, except perhaps setting fire to a house or two, and when, by pure accident, a shell did fall into a cockhouse and kill five men, a man said that the natives had been waiting for the missionary's ducks or else they would not have been killed. Shows the benefit of religious teaching, doesn't it?"

"Well, to come back to Jack. The man-of-war game at last got played out, because no man-of-war came, and the natives would not believe him any longer. Then he had to clear, but at the very last, when he was leaving, he told them that he would soon come back with a big war canoe and make them pay a heavy fine in pigs."

"The Tanua people only laughed at him, but as it turned out, strangely enough, Jack kept his word. He had been at Salua about six months when a man-of-war actually did come, not after the natives, but after Jack himself. The counsel had at last—for news traveled slowly then—heard of Jack's pranks at Tanua, and had sent the Sea Gull, which happened to be in Apia at the time, down to arrest him. It was a bad lookout for Jack, for there were enough crimes charged against him to hang a dozen men."

"I was away in the bush hunting wild cattle when the Sea Gull arrived, and that saved Jack—that and his own smartness. The vessel dropped into the lagoon at Salua early one morning and anchored about a mile from the shore, for it was a good, safe harbor, though rather small. Jack from his own hut saw her come in and guessed what she was after. Presently she lowered a boat, and a lieutenant, all gold lace, came ashore in style. Of course he went to my place, for it was the only papalagi house about, and I suppose they thought I would be able to tell them the whereabouts of Jack, having heard that he had been seen around Salua."

"When the lieutenant opened the gate, there was Jack, as bold as brass, sitting on an easy chair upon the veranda reading an old newspaper and looking very much at home."

"I nearly died of laughing when Jack told me the story afterward, mim-

"Yes, girl, you can make some more," Icking the haw haw style of the lieutenant, who, of course, did not know a word of Samoan, and took everything that Jack said for gospel truth."

"You are Mr. Williams, I suppose," said the lieutenant as polite as possible, taking off his hat."

"Yesir, said Jack. 'Glad to meet you. Step right in and make yourself at home.'"

"So the lieutenant sat down on the veranda and Jack fetched out a bottle of gin, and they had two or three nobblers quite sociable. The officer explained that he had come with a warrant for the arrest of one Jack Wilkinson, whom the British government wanted for murder, arson and a whole host of other crimes."

"In return the officer got a most amazing amount of information about the beach comber."

"Do I know the man?" says Jack. "Why, he's the greatest scoundrel unhung, and he's ruining my trade by the lies he tells the natives. I only wish you would clear him out of Samoa."

"Help them to catch him?" Why, I should think I would, and so will every native in the town when they see the man-of-war here to back them up. The fellow was here last week, but he's gone to his old place, Tanua, to try and get some pigs."

"When the lieutenant heard this, he was all in haste to get away."

"Don't be in too much of a hurry," said Jack. "You'd better go slow. It's a most dangerous passage, and the chances are ten to one you'll get stuck on a reef, but if you'll wait a minute while I close the store I don't mind going with you and piloting you around. I'd do anything to get that wretch caught."

"So Jack, putting on my best coat, went off with the lieutenant, and the captain, knowing nothing of the coast, was very glad to accept him as pilot, and gave him $20 for his services too."

"On the passage round Jack spun them a long yarn about the savage natives of Tanua. They were terribly fierce, he said, always fighting, and Wilkinson would probably stir them up to attack the landing party and so prevent his arrest. They ought to go ashore with a strong armed force and, if possible, a field gun or two."

"The advice sounded reasonable enough to the captain, and, of course, the officers and men were delighted at the prospect of a scrimmage."

"It was quite a little army which landed that afternoon. There was a whole large load of sailors and marines, all armed to the teeth, and a couple of small cannon, which they pointed at the big round chief's house in the center of the village. They may be sure the peaceful people of Tanua were scared out of their wits."

"It was Jack's turn now, and he made the most of it. He called all the chiefs together into the mara—that's the open space in the center of the village where they always do their talking—and held a long fono. The lieutenant stood by all the time, not understanding a word of what was going on. Jack told the trembling Samoans that the great Queen Victoria in her palace of the big seas had heard of the way in which one of her people had been treated and had sent the man-of-war to blow the village into the air, to hang all the chiefs and to carry off the rest of the people as slaves."

"Naturally the chiefs, seeing all these soldiers with their shining guns, believed every word of the yarn, and groveled before Jack, imploring him at least to save their lives."

"The rascally interpreter explained to the lieutenant that the natives wished to pay homage to the queen, and that they would take steps at once to find out where Wilkinson was hiding."

"On the other hand, he told the chiefs that he had interceded for them, and that the officer had promised to spare their lives if they brought next morning a whole host of pigs and rams and taro and bananas, all the food they could raise. The natives were glad to get off so easily, the young men were sent at once to plantations, and they promised to have everything ready in the morning."

"After some more talk, just to cover up his deceit, Jack informed the lieutenant that the man they were after had gone to a place a few miles off in the bush, but that the natives would send after him and bring him back in the morning."

"So the officer, well satisfied, took his men and his guns back on board again, and Jack stopped with the natives, being treated now with the greatest respect."

"Next day he had the large village war canoe, which seated 20 paddlers on each side, loaded up with pigs and fresh provisions of all kinds, and went off to do some business with the Sea Gull. As they had had nothing but salt horse on board for a month, the purser was glad to buy the food, and Jack pocketed $100 by the transaction. He didn't give the natives a penny of it, but told them the man-of-war would let them off this time if they would promise to behave themselves in future."

"Then he informed the captain he had learned that Wilkinson had gone across the mountains to Salua, and that if he liked he would pilot him back there."

"On the way Jack thought of a new dodge. He knew that by this time I would have returned from the cattle hunting expedition, and that, if he went ashore with the officer, they would find out who he was. After the way he had fooled the man-of-war he felt certain that there would be no mercy for him. So he persuaded the captain it was no use going straight into Salua with the ship, for Wilkinson would only run away again as soon as he saw her coming."

"You land me," he said, 'at a point about a mile this side of the town and then stand out to sea for the night. I'll walk into Salua and tell Wilkinson you've abandoned the search and gone away. I'll keep him there for the night and next morning you can slip in quietly and arrest him before he has time to get away.'"

"The land to the westward of Salua juts out in a long point, so that a vessel coming from this direction, if she keeps well inshore, cannot be seen until she is right off the bay. The man-of-war lay to the other side of this point, and Jack, who knew of a handy boat passage through the reef, was put on shore. In the afternoon he walked into my house and found me wondering where he had got to, as I wanted him to help salt down a fine cow I had shot. 'Never mind the blunked beef,' he shouted. 'Get the gin quick or else I shall die of laughing.'"

"He just held his sides and screamed for about half an hour, and then when he had swallowed a couple of stiff nips he told me all about it."

"I couldn't help laughing, too, though I did not half like being personated by such an old scoundrel, and, besides, I was afraid I might get into trouble when the captain found out the trick. He might think I had been helping Jack to deceive them, and perhaps arrest me instead."

"I told Jack this, but he only laughed the more. Then I got angry and told him to clear out at once or else I would give him up when the ship came back, but he wouldn't go for a long time, not until he had finished the bottle, and before he left he wrote a letter to the captain. He wouldn't let me help him, though he was not much of a scholar. Said he wanted to have the joke all to himself. I kept a copy of the letter as a curiosity. This is what he wrote:

"DEAR CAPTAIN—This is to thank you for your great kindness in taking me for a passage to Tanua any time you want a pilot I shall be glad to oblige you. If you want more pigs my friend Williams will supply them. I am going back to the back of you want me you must fetch me from there. Your grateful servant, J. WILKINSON."

"Then he went off into the thick bush which covered the mountains in the interior of the island, where no white man could catch him."

"Next morning I had to bear my share of the joke. When the lieutenant came on shore he found me sitting on the veranda, just where Wilkinson had been a couple of days before. He made sure he had got his mau. It was no use my explaining. So I was arrested and taken off to the man-of-war, and I gave the captain Jack's letter. He was mad when he read it, but then, like a gentleman, he saw the joke, though it was against him."

"We're been sold," he said; 'most damnable sold,' and then he told his officers, and they all laughed together."

"They treated me well on board when they found that I was innocent, and I got them some Samoans to guide the party which went into the bush in pursuit of Jack, but it was no manner of use their trying to catch him, even if the natives had not taken care to lead them astray. So after fooling around in the bush for a couple of days, climbing up and down mountains and nearly falling over a precipice, they gave it up, and the man-of-war sailed away."

"And did Jack get off after all?" I asked, for I could not help sympathizing with the cunning scoundrel."

"Oh, Jack!" concluded the trader. "He came back to my place after awhile and hung round for a month or two, but Samoa, he could see, was getting too warm. So he took the first opportunity of escaping to a tip which had been annexed then."

JEWELS

FOUND AT BOTTOM OF A BIG PILE OF KINDLING.

Stolen Last April from the Holland House—Total Value Twelve Thousand Dollars.

New York, Nov. 13.—Down in a dark corner in a cellar of the tenement house at No. 326 East 34th street yesterday, two central office detectives found at the bottom of a big pile of kindling wood a jewel case and when they raised the cover the tallow candle they carried showed a great mass of jewels that made them gasp with astonishment.

The kindling wood and the bin holding it are the property of Patrick Bolan, who for eight years has worked in the Holland House. A few hours before the detectives invaded the cellar they had arrested Bolan at the lower end of the Bowery while he was trying to pawn for $35 a magnificent pearl necklace that had cost $3,000.

The necklace and most of the other jewels belong to Mrs. Wm. J. Matheson, wife of the president of the Wm. J. Matheson Company, dealers in white lead. The Mathesons were at the Holland House last April when the jewels were stolen. The value of the jewels stolen was $12,000.

FAREWELL

TO MR. E. L. WEISGERBER BY B. & O. EMPLOYEES.

The B. & O. Company Highly Honors Retiring Master Mechanic, Who Lives in Newark.

(Baltimore, Md., American.)

The Concord Club was the scene on Sunday night of a great demonstration in honor of Mr. Edward L. Weisgerber, the retiring master mechanic of the Mt. Claire shops of the B. & O. road. Fully 500 persons were present in the vicinity of the clubhouse and many were unable to gain admittance to the building.

Mr. Weisgerber was presented with a handsome diamond scarf pin, the gift of his fellow workmen. The presentation speech was made by Mr. George Kolb, and feelingly responded to by Mr. Weisgerber.

Accompanying the gift was a handsomely engrossed set of resolutions expensively framed setting forth the esteem in which Mr. Weisgerber is held by his fellow workmen. The resolutions read:

"With the termination of your tenure of the office of Master Mechanic of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company at Mount Claire, it is our pleasure to give to you some evidence of the veneration and esteem in which we hold you and to recall in a manner that will be lasting and as indelibly written on the tablets of our memories, the facts of our associations, of our collaborations and of the impress of your personality upon those with whom you have come in contact, and upon the physical being of those things which have felt the touch of your hand and brain.

The six years of your service as master mechanic at Mount Claire terminates your long and honorable career in the employ of this company, covering a period of 46 years, and dating from the days of your apprenticeship at Wheeling in 1856, to machinist in 1860, to foreman in 1866, to general foreman in 1866, and to master mechanic in 1876 at Connellsville, to Wheeling in 1873, to Grafton in 1877, to Newark in 1880, and to Mount Claire in 1896 up to the present time.

"We, who have been in active daily contact with you in pursuit of our business in the various capacities have been benefited by our associations, and to your tireless energy, zeal and knowledge is due in large measure, the improvements around us.

"With you, upon your continued journey, our regard and esteem and our love, for out of the work that has been done there shines brightly, semper fideles to the things and to the men and the duties that have come your way."

The resolution was signed by Messrs E. T. White, Charles T. Turner, Chas. F. Weber, Thomas C. Lace, Jacob D. Mullen, David Andrews, Michael Nicholson, Wm. O. Peach, Thomas A. Pietsch, John T. Mercer, P. H. Barnes, J. D. Wright, J. T. Tonny, J. J. Fatum and Oliver M. King.

Speeches were also delivered by Messrs. Daniel I. Loden, J. A. Nicholson, Wm. Brown, Patrick O'Mars, Charles T. Turner and J. T. Mercer, and vocal selections were rendered by George Ewalt and Robert Wanerick.

TO LIVE IN NEWARK.

Mr. Weisgerber's many Newark friends will be glad to know that he has been highly honored by the B. & O. company, which he has so faithfully served for many years. Instead of being placed on the company's pension list, Mr. Weisgerber has been retired on a splendid salary. This is the first time the company has departed from its old policy of pensioning employees. In the retirement of Mr. Weisgerber After a brief trip to California Mr. Weisgerber and daughters will make their home in Newark.

COUNTRESS

SPENT 22 YEARS TO PREPARE FOR DEATH.

German Fugitive of Wars Became Wife of Cleveland Man—Buried in Wisconsin.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—After 22 years spent in preparing for her death by leading an existence of seclusion from the world, a woman almost a centenarian died yesterday as she knelt in prayer at the academy of Our Lady at Ninety-fifth and Throop streets.

Within the same cloistered walls the bent old figure had bowed her head in religious devotion for more than two decades. She was a German countess by birth, a fugitive during the Napoleonic wars, when she was 3 years old, and, grown to womanhood, the widow of a rich Cleveland, Ohio, merchant.

She died without money, befriended by the nuns in the Catholic convent in Chicago.

"Died at this convent, Monday night, Mme. Cecelia von Buedinger Mathivet, 99 years old. A woman with a history. Lived in retirement 22 years preparing for death."

This paragraph became a part of the records of the Academy of Our Lady, and today a funeral moved in mournful procession away from the chapel where Mme. Mathivet spent her last years.

"The woman with a history" will be laid to rest in Ellen Grove, Wis. There is a cemetery near Waukesha which is set apart for orphans and nuns of the Catholic church.

It had been the prayer of the aged woman that she might be buried in the consecrated ground.

Services were held at the convent, and the sisters at the institution followed the remains to the grave.

Though she was not a nun and had no part in the services at the chapel of the Academy of Our Lady, the Countess was seen day after day and year after year at every service. Mme. Mathivet came to the convent when she was 77 year old. That was in 1880. She was the daughter of a German nobleman, a Count who was forced to flee from his ancestral home during the Napoleonic wars early in the nineteenth century. She was taken to France when she was three years old. That is as much as the nuns at the convent know of her early history. When she was a young girl, however, she came to America, and in Cleveland met and married a Mr. Mathivet, one of the wealthy residents of the Ohio city in his day. He died in 1872 leaving all his property to his widow. How she came to lose it was one of the things the poor old woman would not reveal.

ZANESVILLE

Mayor Punishes Police Judge Reed—Excitement in the Clay City Wednesday Night.

Zanesville, O., Nov. 13.—Mayor Jas. L. Holden administered a thrashing shortly before 9 o'clock last night to Police Judge Frank L. Reed.

The affray occurred in the private office of the mayor on the second floor of the city hall, where, the mayor says, he found the judge in company with Mrs. Charles Wendell, with the door locked from the inside.

Mrs. Wendell was arrested two evenings ago for being on the streets in an intoxicated condition at midnight.

The mayor's right hand is badly bruised from the beating he gave Reed but the latter is not badly hurt.

Reed hurried to his home. Later he said that the woman had come to the office to pay a fine. Only a few months ago Holden and Reed fought in police court and Reed fined the mayor for contempt.

DEATH

THE DENOUMENT OF ROMANCE IN MICHIGAN.

Miles Beebe Leaves Young Wife Third of a Million—His Daughters are Ignored.

St. Joseph, Mich., Nov. 13.—The death of Miles Beebe, the wealthiest citizen of the village of Paypaw, Mich., 30 miles north of this city, is the denouement of a romance which began a short time ago. Beebe was 70 years of age, a widower and anxious to spend his last years in domestic happiness on his farm, two miles east of the village.

A few months ago, he wrote to a matrimonial journal for a wife, which ended in his meeting a train from Chicago one evening and escorting Miss Mayburns, a Chicago young woman, to his home on the farm. She was a girl of 24, a brunette, with shrewd black eyes. The bride-elect was pleased with farm life and the marriage followed.

To all appearances the couple seemed happy and contented, until a few months ago when the aged husband arrived from the field one day and found that his young wife had deserted him taking along $3,000 of his money. Later she attempted to cash checks but failed in her mission. After this he persuaded his wife to return to his home and Beebe was stricken with apoplexy and died. It is said the young wife received property valued at $300,000 by will. Three daughters were ignored in the will by their father.

The case of the State of Ohio vs. Virgil Dush, charged with stealing a pony from Wm. Owens and selling the same to Kin Shephard for $58, which has been on trial before Justice A. J. Crilly all of Wednesday and a part of Thursday, has been continued until Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

WEDDING—Logan W. Gill and Miss Louise Baker were married by Rev. L. C. Sparks at noon Thursday. They will take up their residence in Coshocton.
